

This week we were delighted to host TAU's Vice President of Public Affairs and Resource Development, Amos Elad, in London for his first visit to the UK in over a year. He enjoyed meeting with our Trustees, updating them on how Tel Aviv University managed during the pandemic by turning problems into opportunities, launching TAU's new Center for Combating Pandemics and becoming a leader in global research on the pandemic and vaccines, among other things.

We were especially excited to hear how YOUR support was translated into emergency scholarships, enabling students to continue their studies even during economic struggles. While the visit was short, it was a great start, with a few in-person meetings that we hope will be the start of more such visits from TAU leaders and star faculty in the coming months.

We were also fortunate to host a group of supporters from BFAMI at 'The Boiler Room', TAU's design for the 2021 London Design Biennale, who were given a private tour of the Israeli Pavilion. If you haven't done so yet, you can still get your tickets to visit, or show your support by donating scholarships to students at TAU's School of Architecture.

Speaking of supporting TAU... next week Amazon holds their annual 'Prime Day' (21-22 June), so if you shop at Amazon, make sure to register with Amazon Smile, and turn your shopping into donations to TAU. On 'Prime Day', Amazon will increase their donation rate for Prime members by up to ten times, with no cost to you, so please check the 'Support Us' section of this email to register.

Last but not least, on Wednesday, top researchers from Israel and the world participated in a special webinar organized by TAU's Kantor Center for the Study of Contemporary European Jewry, and marking 5 years to the presentation of the IHRA definition. If you missed the live event, you can now find it in the webinar library section of this email.

Thank you, stay safe and Shabbat Shalom,

Cara G. Case
Chief Executive
