

Dear << Test First Name >>,

Preparations for our Night at the Movies are well underway, and I am excited to share this special publication, providing a deeper insight into our keynote speaker and guest of honour, TAU alum and Golden Globe-winning producer and director, Hagai Levi. An Israeli success story, Levi's 2005 debut In Treatment was adapted in 20 countries around the world, and his recent highly acclaimed Scenes from a Marriage, was one of the first television series shot in Covid-safe conditions in 2020. We are honoured to have him as our guest.

We are delighted to host this event at the newly renovated BAFTA. Join us to experience a unique and special evening of Israeli cinema.

We also hope that if you are a young professional, you will take advantage of our £30 under 30 offer.

Book your seats now for this flagship event that we are thrilled to share with you!

HAGAI'S SHOWS

It is still very superior TV, as the central performances are mesmerising, and the scripts tight enough to enable you to suspend disbelief.

John Crace, The Guardian

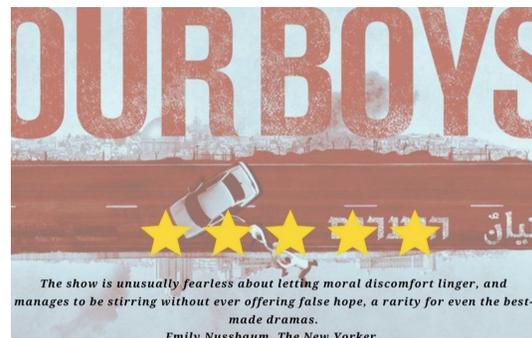

inTREATMENT

HBO

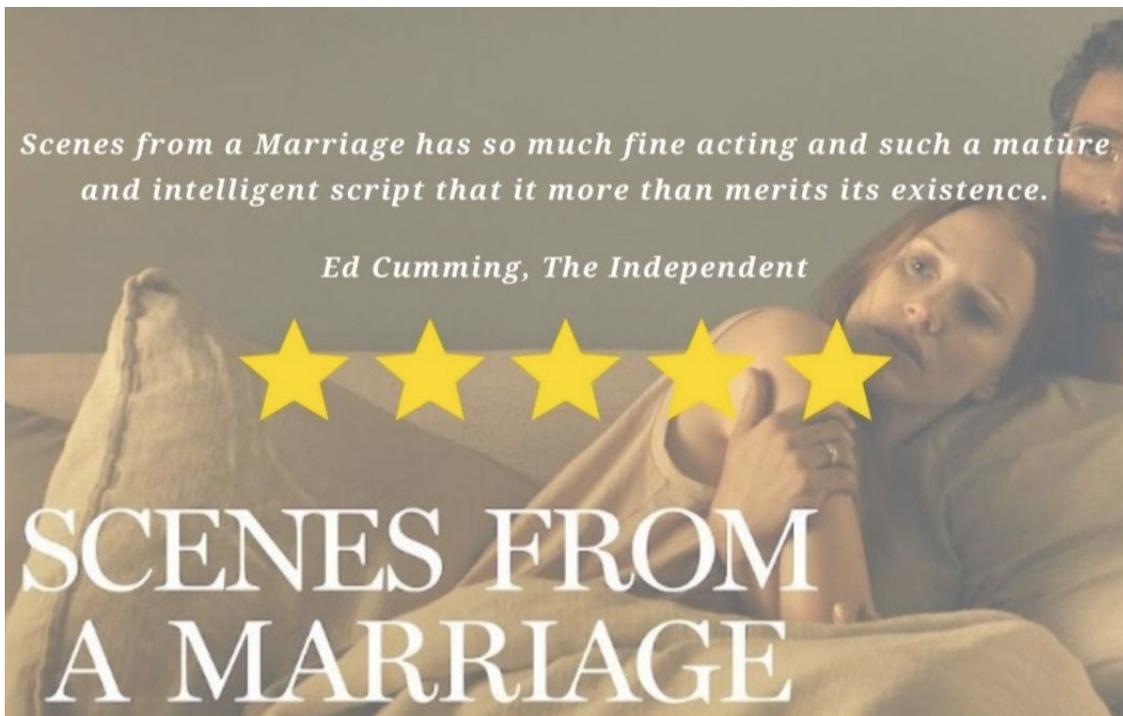

There aren't many series at the moment quite like it or as good.

Allesandra Stanley, NY Times

The show is unusually fearless about letting moral discomfort linger, and manages to be stirring without ever offering false hope, a rarity for even the best-made dramas.

Emily Nussbaum, The New Yorker

Scenes from a Marriage has so much fine acting and such a mature and intelligent script that it more than merits its existence.

Ed Cumming, The Independent

I didn't think I even have a chance of winning,

Founded in 1972, the Steve Tisch School of Film and Television offers unique and diverse opportunities for developing proficiency in film and television production and for studying film history, theory, and criticism. Many of Israel's most prominent filmmakers, scholars and critics are among its graduates; student films produced in the school are regularly screened and win awards in prestigious international festivals.
