

Do you want to help us
design the Israeli Pavilion
at the London Design Biennale?

We are excited that TAU's School of Architecture won a competition to design the Israeli Pavilion at the 2021 London Design Biennale, opening on the 1st of June. This year's Biennale is the first in person international festival to return to the UK after more than a year, and unlike any other year - YOU can be a part of the designing team. How?

The Israeli Pavilion is a multi-sensory experience called 'The Boiler Room', made from 2,500 hashtagged boiler switches, that represent the boiling discourse and the tensions between what is global and what is national. We invite you to turn on a switch, for £10, which will in turn appear in the physical version of the installation at Somerset House, where people from all over the world will interact with each other's opinions both digitally and personally. The donation of each switch will be used solely to support the installation.

Visit 'The Boiler Room' Website

Visit the 'Save the Date' section of this email, where you will see details on how to book your tickets. There's also an invitation to join the Dan David Prize Award Ceremony on Sunday 9th May and, as always, if you can't make the live broadcast, you'll be able to find all our webinars in our 'Webinar Library', including a recent webinar on innovation in learning.

Please note that we are moving to our new offices in NW2, starting Tuesday 4 May. we can't wait to meet you there.

Cara G. Case

Chief Executive

Save the Date

2021 London Design Biennale

1-27 June 2021

Watch the world's most ambitious and imaginative designers and curators from all around the world take over Somerset House, as participants will respond to the theme of "Resonance", which considers the ripple effect of ground-breaking design concepts on the way we live, and the choices we make.

"It has been an incredibly difficult year for the industry, but this programme will bring us together as an international community to reflect and collaborate on the challenges that lie ahead" (Sadiq Khan, Mayor of London)
